

I have been a subscriber to satellite radio for some five months now. Frankly, the quality and diversity of programming makes our local radio stations pale by any comparison. They universally program to the lowest commonest denominator. I find it unconscionable that the NAB should attempt to limit the scope of satellite radio programming. I frequently use the Philadelphia traffic and weather channel on XM radio because they offer information while I am driving and exactly when I need it, not when some local radio station decides to transmit it.